Next to Judge Morrow the writer fancies Raceland. The old saving of a "lean horse for a long race" is peculiarly and in Raceland's case. He is aiready a suburban winner. He is a grand horse, and his work has been very good. He may be second.

As he will probably be coupied with long-street or Sanquet in the betting call three being owned by M. F. Dwyer, speculators will have an advantage, for this is a trio hard to beat.

For thur place the writer likes Walcott & For thur place the writer likes Walcott &

For third place the writer likes Walcott & Campbell's Pessara, who is in great shape.
Cassius was to have been the candidate in this stable, for his work had been excellent.
A few days ago, however, he began to go wrong, and the news comes that Carsius was withdrawn at 0.15 o'clock this morning.

THE ART OF WAR.

Why a Student Would Have Surrendered a Fortified Garrison. If war could be carried on by the rules laid down for students in the dreadful art it would become an easy process. In military tactics it is the "expected" which happens; in real life, the "unexpected."

A certain General, says the author of 'A Transitlantic Holiday," had gone to West Point on a tour of inspection, and being a little vain of his own military requirements, he treated the students to an elaborate demonstration of the tac-tics by which a particular fort might be taken with unfailing certainity, in three weeks' time. He then turned to his au-

The name of Bermuda, who was believed by Kentuckians to have a grand chance, is also omitted, as be has gone lame. Kingston, Eon, Loantaka and other cracks are in poor shape, and will not be among the contestants. A resume of the best performances of the probable starters is in order. The post of nonor probably belongs to Longstreet. He is invorte with the public, and in the estimation of the handicapper, who makes him carry top weight.

The charge brought against the Mayor is the outcome of a bitter political contest over the Legislature's partisan acts, authorizing the Governor to appenin Justices and take away magisterial powers from the Mayor. The charge against the Mayor was made by a man named brady, who had been committed for drunkenness.
